A Gypsy Supper.

A social event which for originality of design, success in execution and in pleasure rendered to guests surpassed any other similar occasion known in the history of Louisa, occurred on Monday evening last. Held at the Two Methodist Since the arrival of her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Wysor, of Allentown, Pa., Mrs. J. J. Fagg has spared no pains or effort to make her visit a pleasant one. The "function" Tuesday was designed and executed Rev. F. F. Shannon, of Brooklyn, by Mrs. Fagg, aided and abetted by good sized house, even a big yard with its swings and croquet, not expansive enough. doors was required and they used hose in the ground under the sack. it. Maids, matrons and men were declined. They gathered at a point on the river, just north of the residence of Jay Vinson and made ready for the supper. Big fires were built, and soon the feast was underway. This is a bad figure. hole they had dug, and but for the for there were no ships nearer than Old Point Comfort, but there were many other figures present which made up for this "break" And the News hastens to say that none of the figures seemed at all made up. Meats were cooked in gypsy fashion, and they were eat there was much that few gypsies ever ate, but all looked good, tasted good and was good.
